Comments

“ There were often times when one wondered why Dan did some things; however, in the long run his intentions became clear and were in the best interest of his family. Dan was true to his Midwestern Values to the end and was not tainted by anything along the way.

“ Memories: We met Dan and Betty at square dancing--enjoyed dancing many tips with them. We recall the time Dan and other square dancers performed as "whistling midgets." Hilarious! We also enjoyed many games of pinochle with him and Betty. In addition, we remember a trip where they, Jeff and Laura went with us in a motor home to Las Vegas. We ran out of gas on the return trip just outside of the Grand Canyon and Earl and Dan took the dishpan to the service station to obtain gas--couldn't do that now. Helped them move into home in South Austin--was helping Dan set up beds to sleep in and he told me I put the top sheet on wrong. He said, "The pretty side goes down." Every time I make up a bed I think of his remarks. We loved Dan and pray that he is spending his eternal life in heaven. Pray God is carrying the family during the difficult days ahead. God will tenderly comfort you." 2 Corinthians 1:7" {TLB)
